RICHARD MANSFIELD ENDORSES THE "HAM SHOW."

Fisher S. Harris as Marcus Brutus

Itichard Mansfield has set the seal of his approval on the Press club's production of "Hamlet."

He says it will be "very clever."

"I wish I could remain over to see the performance," he remarked.

"I know I should enjoy it very much."

Mr. Mansfield was shown the book al rehearsal.

"By Jove," he exclaimed, "I'd no lea you had so much talent in Salt, ake. Why, that's really very clevit, don't you know. That would be successe anywhere, with localizations to with the plane. to suit the place. Really, it

Mr. Mansfield lapsed into a discus-sion of William Shakespeare and his works.

"Really, you know," he said in the course of conversation, "it does seem a shame to buriesque such a great work as 'Hamlet,' or to make a travesty of such scenes as the balcony scene between Romeo and Juliet, or the great climax in 'Julius Caesar,' ness of it and it tends to lower the standard of the stage. But it's different in this case. I suppose the newspaper men have license to consider nothing too sacred for a joke."

The seat sale went at a lively rate again yesterday. The first floor is sold out for the first night, and numbers of people are forming "gallery parties" to view the show from the upper floors. The prospects are that. parties to view the show from the upper floors. The prospects are that the tenmost gallery will furnish seats for large numbers of people who rarely go above the first floor except when the crush at a Press club show ning.

Around Shakespeare's great masterplece, "Hamlet," has been constructed a burlesque which works in characters from other Shakespearean plays and which bristles with orig-nent Salt Lake men and women and various familiar phases of Salt Lake life are taken off An effort has been made to create a production that would be more than mere horseplay, having real merit from a humorous standpoint. Whether success has crowned these efforts, the public must judge. The Salt Lake public was kind in its verdict on the Press club's burlesque of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" a year ago. Some of the actors who made big hits in that show take leading parts in the forthcoming production, which is more elaborate and has been prepared with greater care.

Harry L. A. Culmer makes his first appearance on any stage in the fifter role. Mr. Culmer has staged production, as he had done for the "Tom Show," and has carried this burden. Not long ago B. S. Young, who was to play Hamilet, wired that it would be impossible for him to reach Salt Lake in time to take the part. Mr. Culmer yielded to the urgent requests of the entertainment committee and reluctantly agreed to play the role. Thus is a new star to be introduced to the Salt Lake public. John D. Spencer, who was the Uncle Tom's appearance on any stage in the title role. Mr. Culmer has staged productions in Salt Lake for many years, gaining high reputation as a stage recovery by the production of Juliet. Tod Goodwin, once Aunt Ophelia, is now Hamlet's Ophelia. Others in the cast are as follows:

gaining high reputation as a stage manager, but he never appeared in public. He would play every individual role with great ability during Polomius ...
